

CLAIM

1. Medical apparatus, for the treatment of living beings, having a magnetic field, more especially having a pulsating magnetic field, characterised in that an
5 element, which radiates a magnetic field, is inserted into a vagina of a woman or into an anal region of a living being, the element being flexible and comprising an inert tube, into which magnetised or magnetisable balls are introduced in an attractive alignment, or magnetised or magnetisable rings are arranged in adjacent rows in opposite alignment, and which tube is shaped to 10 form a ring.